The Pastor Speaks

by J. J. Bowman

The Bible is a timeless book in that it speaks to the needs and emotions of mankind in all generations. In the last several decades many advancements have been made in science and many inventions have added to our physical advancements, little has been done to improve our spiritual and emotional life. Happiness, sadness, and fear make up the emotional life of most individuals.

In the study of our Bible, we should read it with imagination. In using our imagination, events of the Scriptures become alive.

Let us try to visualize a group of shepherds huddles around a small fire on one of the hills around Bethlehem. The conversation turns to religion and in turns each of the shepherds tells of the God who controls his life. The time now comes for David to speak. We can imagine him standing, and saying, "Well, to me, the Lord is like a shepherd." David was a shepherd and knew of the love and devotion a shepherd had for his flock. To David this was the way his God protected him. David reflected on the way a shepherd found good, clear and calm water for the flocks to drink, and how the shepherd found good pasture in which to eat.

To David, God does all of this for his people in his protective care. God cares for the feeling of his people; "He restoreth", here an element of quietness; "Green pastures" – here a restful color to the eyes; "Restores my soul" –here a strength of inter power. This is the way God deals with us.

When we read our Bible with imagination and spiritual insight, we see that it speaks to our needs today. We may have enlarged our "pastures' and have improved our "drinking places" but we have not done much to improve human nature.

God wants to restore our souls and here is our greatest need. Try studying your Bible with the view of seeing how God meets our spiritual needs and gives the peace that passes all understanding.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

YOU, THE PREACHER

Lesson for May 14, 1972

Background Scripture: Luke 2:16-21; Romans 10:14-18; Ephesians 3:7-13.

Devotional Reading: Ephesians 3:7-13.

"The best way to revive a church," said evangelist Dwight L. Moody, "is to build a fire in the pulpit."

Sometimes building "a fire in the pulpit" does more than reviving a church; it may also renew a community or even a whole nation. There are many evidences in the Old Testament of the far-reaching effects of proclamation by the prophets of Judah and Israel.

There are more contemporary illustrations available to us, too. A little more than a century ago, Alexis de Tocqueville, a French writer, visited our nation and made this observation:

I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbours and her ample rivers; and it was not there; in the fertile fields and boundless prairies, and it was not there. Not until I went into the churches of America, and heard her pulpits aflame with righteousness, did I understand the secret of her genius and power.

Proclaiming The Good News

Think of how the preaching of Jesus changed, not only Judaism, but the world as well. Jesus saw in himself the fulfillment of Isaiah 61:1,2:

The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he has annointed me to preach good news to the poor. He has sent me to proclaim release to the captives and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty those who are oppressed, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord.

St. Francis of Assist one day said to another monk, "Brother, let us go down into the town and preach." So they set off for town, conversing as they went. When, at last they had walked through the length and bredth of the town, the other monk inquired, "Father, when shall we begin to preach?" "My son," replied St. Francis, "we have been preaching; we were preaching while we walked. We were observed by our fellows, our behavior has been remarked, and thus we have delivered a morning sermon. My child, it is no use that we walk anywhere unless we preach as we walk."

Preaching As We Walk

One does not have to mount a pulpit in order to proclaim the Good News. There are a number of men and women in my church who preach from the pulpit when I am absent – and very convincingly at that – but their words from the pulpit would matter little if they were not equally convincing in the silent preaching they do in their everyday walk through life.

Hamlett, Larry Stallings and Bill Mann attended. Demonstration and personal participation in safety line use and rigging, as well as descent from high places, rope ladder, climbing, lowering victims and river dragging was the order of the day. The session was most informative and the members attending sincerely appreciated the knowledge and assistance passed on by Captain Glass and his men.

Squad members now have 12 mobile radios in use on private cars and the ambulance. This will greatly improve expediting assistance when needed. All radios on personal cars were purchased by the individual members.

The Concord Rescue Squad is in the final stages of the E.M.T. Course with only four more sessions to attend. This course is being taken at Appomattox along with the Appomattox County Rescue Squad and the Gladstone Rescue Squad.

team defeated the Red team 24-7.

Mark must play out next season before he can be eligible for a grant-in-aid. He was what is known as a "walk on" candidate to college coaches. Weatherly was one of only three walk on who was not out at the conclusion of spring football.

Some of the coaches comments were, "Mark gave 110% in it at all times." "He does not lack courage. He will hit you." He has excellent initial quickness and we are working on his overall speed."

Coach Bryant commented that it takes a lot of courage for a boy to walk on the field at the University of Alabama with no scholarship and tell the coaches he wants to play for Alabama.

Young Weatherly, who is a pre clinical psychology major began playing among the football dummies at the tender age of two years when his dad was Head Coach at Sewanee Military in Tennessee. Dr. Weatherly commented that Mark knew every one of the players by name and that he would sometimes find him fast asleep among the pile of dummies after practice.

Mark learned most of his football under Coach Gordon Bragg and gives him the credit for any success he has had. He has tremendous respect for the veteran coach who had one of the winningest records in Virginia scholastic football.

How does Coach Bragg feel about his former pupil? "He was the roughest man on the squad and he would try his best to do what I told him he had to do to make our game plan successful. He's a fine boy and I am truly proud of him."

The coach expressed the feelings of our town for we are proud of Mark.
